

I have never read anything on DeFacebook that rose above the level of mindless chatter. I maintain an acct only because sometimes I need to view a sub page of a store or organization or very rarely a personal profile that requires me to log in. (I suspect many millions of other DeFacebook accts exist for the same reason as mine.) But such occasions are rare, because if some organization or person maintains an internet presence only on DeFacebook rather than its or his or her own website, usually I lose interest and explore them no further.

So here doing to DeFacebook what should be done to DeFacebook. I do not understand the allure of DeFacebook, as I would prefer to join an anti-social network in order to know about you not what you want to tell everyone, but what you do not want to tell anyone. And if you do not recognize mein Friends from current news events, you might consider googling their names.

- |   |  |                       |
|---|--|-----------------------|
|    | Bernard Madoff                          | Add as Friend  |
|    | James Holmes                            | Add as Friend  |
|   | Josef Fritzl                            | Add as Friend  |
|  | Rod Blagojevich                         | Add as Friend  |
|  | Steven Hayes &amp; Joshua Komisarjevsky | Add as Friends |
|  | James von Brunn                         | Add as Friend  |
|  | Anthony Sowell                          | Add as Friend  |
|  | Rip Torn                                | Add as Friend  |
|  | Chuck Steak                             | Add as Friend  |
|  | Virginia Hamm                           | Add as Friend  |
|  | O.J. Simpson                            | Add as Friend  |
|  | Lindsay Lohan                           | Add as Friend  |
|  | Mark M. Braunstein                      | Add as Friend  |
|  | Alfred E. Neuman                        | Add as Friend  |